By integrating a large rental fleet with its proprietary T3® operating system, EquipmentShare has created a digital-first model built to provide contractors with real-time data and unified management. EquipmentShare’s operating model combines a modern fleet and national scale with the innovation and vision of a technology leader, allowing EquipmentShare to deliver better outcomes for customers who demand safer, smarter, and more profitable jobsites.

“Our vision since we founded EquipmentShare more than 10 years ago was to transform the fragmented and underserved construction industry and fuel the engine that powers America’s growth,” said Jabbok Schlacks, co-founder and CEO of EquipmentShare. “The substantial investment in infrastructure, energy, and industrial projects over the next 10 years demands a new approach – one that is data-driven, connected, and built for scale. We believe that EquipmentShare is best positioned to connect the industry, and becoming a public company allows us to extend our impact for the customers and communities we serve.”

“As contractors, we spent years on jobsites watching machines sit idle while projects fell behind schedule. It was a systemic failure of visibility,” said Willy Schlacks, co-founder and president of EquipmentShare. “We have an incredible team building the future of construction through our T3 technology platform that connects assets, materials, and people – and we believe it will support our expansion into new verticals and new sectors within and beyond construction. Now, as a public company, we are staying true to our long-term vision of bringing visibility and control to the construction industry: combining physical distribution with the transition from analog processes to a digital reality to modernize how contractors manage every facet of their projects.”
